Omnibus Partnership

The Omnibus Partnership is a voluntary organisation working for the development of public bus and rail that are accessible for all. Since forming, in 1997, The Omnibus Partnership has worked, with Translink, the Department of the Environment, the Department for Regional Development and other relevant organisations, to introduce, develop and evaluate a pilot accessible, inclusive, public transport service, in North Down. It continues to educate professionals, politicians and others about disabled people's public transport needs
